1. Abstract:

One of India's most remarkable characteristics is its unity amid variety. The world's second-largest tribal population originates in India. According to data from the 2011 Census, 8.9% of India's population is classified as tribal. The indigenous people of the nation have distinctive lives and customs along with rich traditions, cultures, and heritage. The government of India has an unwavering commitment towards the development of Tribal communities. While anticipating the tremendous challenges in developing them, and at the same time conserving their cultural heritage, for a population so diverse and unique in their ways with more than 705 different tribal communities spread across the country, the ministry has envisaged and implemented several initiatives. Funds are allotted by the central government for certain ST development initiatives. These programmes may concentrate on things like infrastructural improvements in tribal regions, skill development programmes, educational scholarships, and assistance for tribal enterprises. Affirmative action is granted to STs by the Indian Constitution under Articles 38, 46, and 275 (1). This ensures that they will have special rights and privileges in legislatures, the workplace, and education. The socio-economic development of STs is the primary focus of policy ideas and implementations by the Ministry of Tribal Affairs. India would undoubtedly change if the Tribal Community, who are at the bottom of the hierarchy, were empowered.

3. Introduction:

Overview According to the 2011 Census, Scheduled Tribes make up 8.6% of India's overall population and occupy 15% of the country's land area, mostly in forested, mountainous, and border areas with varying ecological and climatic conditions. Schedules V and VI of the Indian Constitution grant the Scheduled Tribes particular protection. Article 342 of the Indian Constitution notifies of over 705 Scheduled Tribe groupings. 75 tribal groups across 18 States and the Union Territory of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands have been identified and classified as Particularly Vulnerable Tribal Groups (PVTGs) due to factors such as their low literacy rate, economic backwardness, declining or stagnating population, and pre-agricultural level of technology. Since independence, the government has been focused on the growth of the indigenous population formation of Scheduled Tribes through Community Development Programmes was the first of several actions taken for the welfare and development of tribal groups. The Tribal Sub Plan and the Special Multipurpose Tribal Development Block were then adopted. Established in 1999, the Ministry of Tribal Affairs (MoTA) seeks to give the Scheduled Tribes a more integrated, well-coordinated, and planned approach to socioeconomic development. MoTA is the authorised ministry for coordination of general policy, planning, and programming about the development of Schedule Tribes. The Ministry's programmes and projects are intended to supplement and uplift the efforts of State Governments, Voluntary Organisations, and other Central Ministries/Departments by providing financial support. In addition, they address Scheduled Tribes' demands while completing critical gaps.

4. Objectives of the study

- To know the concept of Empowerment.
- To have a brief understanding of the Tribal Sub-Plan (TSP) Concept.
- To analyse the budget allocation for the development of scheduled tribes during the last five years (2014-20).

5. Methodology of the Study

This study is based on the secondary data collected from different journals, magazines various books, and websites.

6. Concept and Meaning of Empowerment

Empowerment is a social action process that encourages individuals, groups, and communities to take control over their lives and societies. It involves balancing power and ideology, controlling physical, human, intellectual, financial, and financial resources. Empowerment allows individuals to act independently and participate in public activities without fear of favouritism. It involves equal access to knowledge, knowledge of one's group, and the creation of an information system. Empowerment empowers disempowered individuals to take charge of their lives and alter their situation. It is a method through which the 86 powerless can alter the balance of power, their way of life, and the inequalities they currently face. It is interesting to note this, the word empowerment was originally first used in the 17th century and can be used to "authorise," "delegate," or "enable." As a result, it is challenging to comprehend the idea of empowerment. In addition, it denotes a dynamic, gradual change in power. Leaders like Mahatma Gandhi, Martin Luther King, and Nelson Mandela oversaw many instances of political empowerment in numerous nations all over the world. Empowerment, in the eyes of the members of the low-power group, refers to activities taken to broaden their base of authority. Empowerment is defined differently depending on the sociocultural, economic, and political context. A comprehensive meaning is always included in an international analysis of local terminology related to empowerment. Some of these concepts include Independence, self-determination, self-control, self-power, self-reliance, personal choice, and the ability to stand up for one's rights.

7. The Concept of Tribal Sub-Plan (TSP)

Balanced growth and economic development is the ultimate aim of every country and the strategic plans (Fifth five-year plans as in the case of India) are designed accordingly. After 25 years of independence, and the successful completion of four five-year and three annual plans, it was realized by policy makers that the Scheduled Tribes are still way behind the mainstream development process. In addition, it was discovered that their socioeconomic situation was not significantly enhanced by the general plan plans and programmes intended for the overall development of the economy. Similarly, the benefit of such general welfare schemes did not percolate down towards the development of the ST population of the country in any significant manner. To eradicate these issues, the “Tribal Sub-Plan was initiated during the Fifth Five-Year Plan (1974–1979).

The basic objective of the Tribal Sub-Plan is to channelise the flow of outlays and benefits from the general sectors in the Central Ministries/Departments for the development of Scheduled Castes and Schedules Tribes, both materially and financially, at least in proportion to their population. According to the Mid-Term Appraisal of the Eleventh Plan, several Central Ministries and Departments have not allocated enough money to TSP concerning the population's share of STs.

The broad objectives of the Tribal Sub-Plans (TSP) are as follows:

- Substantial reduction in poverty and unemployment.
- The establishment of productive assets for Scheduled Tribes to maintain the growth that development initiatives are expected to bring about.
- Human resource development of the Scheduled Tribes by providing Provision of physical and financial security against all types of exploitation and oppression.
- adequate educational and health services, and

Intending to fill the gap in research studies on tribal issues, MoTA recognizes renowned NGOs, Research Institutes, and Universities where expertise exists and which have already made a mark by carrying out revolutionary research in the field of tribal cultures as Centre of Excellences (CoEs). It is envisaged that CoEs should play an important role in building a knowledge bank to complement the dedicated Activities of the Ministry.

10. Conclusion

The central government acts as a key enabler, providing financial resources, formulating policies, and overseeing their implementation to bridge the gap between tribal communities and the rest of the country. This empowers STs through various initiatives and ensures their inclusion in India's growth story. However, successful development requires effective collaboration with state governments and active participation from tribal communities themselves.
